43-PBT93 Signalling Box User's instructions

The signalling box is a simplified fencing panel. It operates on a 9 V battery. Its purpose is to simulate the touches during the bouts of foil/sabre and épée fencing. It should be controlled whether the touches were actual ones and their strength proper.

The switch of the signalling box has two positions. One of them with whistling effect is for foil/sabre fencing and the other one without whistling belongs to épée fencing.

Plug the body cable in the signaling box and in the fencing weapon. After this on touches with a strength according to the rules a whistling could be heard.

The signalling box could be used for training as well as in case of beginners to practice the simplified fencing without fencing panel.

Taking hold the point and the fencing weapon with both hands at the same time results a short-circuit in the apparatus. Under such circumstances it does not respond to the point's pressure, there will not be any whistling. This is not a defect!

When not in use care should be taken not to let the switch in foil position, because this results a continuous whistling and by this the battery could discharge within a short time!
